"My constituents are anxiously election, have now been fulfilled, and nothing remains except the formal inaugural ceremonies of Monday next to set in motion the new administration.

The joint session of the Senate and House was held according to law this morning, and the vote was formally canvassed. As was announced in the public prints of November 9, and from time to time since, Mr. Densen and his companlons upon the Republican State ticket were winners by a margin approximating 200,000 each, and to-day the final O. K. was placed on the returns, after which the Senators and Representatives, who had remained into town for the event, looked upon their work, pronounced it good and adjourned in time to catch the noon trains for home. They will not return until Monday, which is the day set for the inaugu-

Democrat, to win by a margin of 51, This action also let in a Prohibitionist member of the lower house from Peoria-Sheen-who has gained much distinction as the cold-water Representative from the distillery city. Putnam wants a recount, but the opinion seems to be that he will get little sympathy from the Republican Senators, who have a brotal najority and who would not be disposed to reduce the Democratic representation from ten to nine. Senator Dan Campbell, who is boss of the tob on the Senate side, is anything but a Yates man, and at a time several years ago, when Putnam could have helped the Campbell-itusse combination at a critical moment he turned them down. It is therefore, possible that the contest will end in the Elections commutee, to which it was referred. After this the Senate proceeded across the Capital to sit in joint session with the House.

NIEDRINGHAUS EMBARRASSED WHEN HE LEARNS OF SUCCESS

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT. Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 5.-Thomas K. Niedringhaus was standing with his wife night. in his headquarters when the first of his friends at the Capitol building ran breath- NIEDRINGHAUS WELL-KNOWN lessly into the room to congratulate him. It was difficult to tell whether Mr. Nied ringhans or his wife was the more affected. As he thrust out his hand for that warm clasp which has characterized his campaign, he was half laughing and half choked with emotion.

"I don't know what I can say I think that everyone knows that I appreciate this great honor, but just now, when the news is rising through my brain, I cannot collect enough thoughts to perhaps say all that I should.

"I first of all want to thank my friends from the State, who have been so loval from the State, who have been so loyal and good. And I want to extend the hand of friendship to every man that opposed me. I am going to the Senate to represent the people of Missouri, not any factions or classes.

And I will go to Washington a stanch supporter of Theodore Rossetelt and in hearty accord with the administration."

By this time the crowd had filled the room and blocked the doors, and friends and even supporters of other candidates. Were surging about to grasp the hand of Missouri's new Senator. Mrs. Niedringhaus, too, came in for a big share of the ovation.

"You have been with me from bottom to top," said Niedringhaus, "and I don't know how I can thank you. It was you that said in the committee-room in Chicago last summer, 'We must organize.' We did organize, and results came in November. Then, when my candidacy was announced, you took a hold again. We have met success again, and to you I owe a deep debt of graifunde."

Although suffering a hard defeat, Mr. Kerens tried to brave up under the reverse and meet his friends.

"I want to thank my friends from the bottom of my heart," he said, "and I hope for party unity and prosperity.

"I tried to reach the Senate by a hard, honest fight, and I nave no malice toward the successful candidate."

But while his friends were gathering around him, offering what consolation was left, the crowd was increasing around the Niedringhaus headquarters.
